

DECEMBER 2013

HELLO WORLD

Winter is a time of fun, enjoyment and delight! Here is Moyra Malone, a Senior Research Engineer at SRI International, delighting in the snow at Kiruna, Sweden. Is she checking her SRIFCU online banking or sending in a last-minute approval for manufacturing parts? We may never know but you can tell from her smile that she is “turning the back of the envelope” — a term that she uses to mean taking an idea and turning it into a cost-effective product.

Moyra is responsible for product engineering and manufacturing for the Advanced Modular Incoherent Scatter Radar (AMISR) project. This is large-scale manufacturing, with over 13,000 Transmit/Receive Modules produced per radar installation. Managing primary and secondary supply chains, including product costing, she knows about working with teams. What is her secret to getting the synergy of the team working so well together? She says that, at the end of the day, it is all about the people.

Moyra received her engineering degree from the National University of Ireland, Galway. Her volunteer work with the Galway University Foundation has allowed her to meet many interesting people including Bill Clinton, Anjelica Huston and the Prime Minister of Ireland. Coincidentally, Menlo Park recently became a Friendship City of Galway, Ireland. Moyra helped arrange a celebration event for the Mayor of Galway and other dignitaries. Prior to joining SRI International in 2001, Moyra’s work involved projects in Japan, Taiwan, Europe and two start-ups in Silicon Valley.

Moyra has three daughters — identical triplets. Pictured below in New York City’s Central Park are Kerry, Sandra and Stefani. Sandra and Stefani worked summers at SRI International and Kerry worked two summers at the credit union. Sandra is now working at a DNA start-up in San Francisco, Kerry is at a medical firm in Los Angeles and Stefani is pursuing a PhD in Psychiatry in Galway, Ireland. Moyra reflects that “they are my best project yet!” She also passed along “a BIG thank you for supporting college loans so my girls could achieve their educational goals.”

Life takes us all in many directions. Wherever you go, it is all about the people in your life. Enjoy the holidays! Best wishes from all of us for a delightful Christmas.
