HELLO WORLD

It's a delight to see snow in winter! John Shockley, Senior Program Manager, SRI International, takes it to the next level. Pictured above, John is near the summit of Mount Shasta (14,162 ft). He also has hiked Mount Whitney (14,495 ft) with coworker Don Arns, Associate Director.

John Shockley has been in the Center for Software Engineering (CSE) since 2010. He led the National Training and Education Resource Program until early this year, when he started working with a cross-division project on applied semantic technology. Prior to CSE, John was in the Instrumentation and Simulation Program and its predecessors, including the Joint Training and Experimentation Program.

Over the years, John has worked on a number of interesting projects, mostly associated with military testing and training systems. Projects have taken him to military ranges all over the country, as well as a couple of other unusual places, including Kwajalein in the Marshall Islands and Irkutsk, Russia.

If you see John around campus, ask him about some of his SRI travel delays, including a trip to Washington, D.C. during the Loma Prieta Earthquake. Almost 12 years later, John was at a conference in Orlando on September 11, 2001. There were a number of international attendees and John says that it was inspiring to see their support for our country during that time. With a hurricane heading for Orlando that day, his flight was cancelled. Along with three other Californians who were also stranded in Orlando, they carpooled and drove back in 51 hours!

John volunteers at his kids' schools, including band and sports booster groups, school site councils and various district committees. He still works with a non-profit fundraising foundation and is looking forward to seeing his daughters who are currently away at college. With his high school volunteering reduced, his current projects include recertifying his pilot's license and making wine. Hopefully, he won't mix the two at the same time!

John established accounts for every member of the family. His daughters use their accounts, debit and credit cards while away at college. Direct deposits were set up for their part-time jobs, along with saving accounts. Using our credit and debit cards on overseas trips saved money on currency exchange fees.

This is a season of sharing. Enjoy your holidays. From all of us, wishing you a Delightful Christmas and Wonderful New Year!
